In a multimillion-dollar twist on celebrity musical chairs, singer-actress Jessica Simpson has purchased Sharon and Ozzy Osbourne's estate in Hidden Hills for $11.5 million, public records show.

The Cape Cod-inspired mansion, built in 2001, sits on a 2.5-acre promontory off a cul-de-sac in the gated community. It features a paneled study with fireplace, a home theater and studio area, six en suite bedrooms and a guest apartment with kitchenette. The family room of the 11,000-square-foot home has sliding barn doors and a reclaimed brick fireplace.

The grounds include a swimming pool, spa and barbecue island.

In addition to her work on reality TV, Simpson, 32, starred in the films "Major Movie Star" (2008), "Blonde Ambition" (2007) and "The Dukes of Hazzard" (2005).

Sharon Osbourne, 60, is a co-host on "The Talk" (2010-present) and has been a judge on "America's Got Talent" and "The X Factor." She also is the manager of Ozzy Osbourne, 64, who made his mark as the lead singer of Black Sabbath. The pioneering heavy metal group continues to tour.

The couple paid nearly $12.4 million for the estate in 2007, public records show.

Jonah Wilson of Hilton & Hyland and Tomer Fridman of Ewing & Associates Sotheby's were the listing agents. Jory Burton of Sotheby's Beverly Hills office represented Simpson.
